

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.
THURSDAY, January 25, 1894.

CROSBY S. NOYES, Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation nearly double the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

In order to avoid delay, on account of persons sending letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Department, according to tenor of purpose.

Senator David B. Hill is in danger of losing his reputation for shrewdness. Heretofore no one has accused the empire state's senator of lacking political discernment, but there are several persons who are being rapidly convinced that Mr. Hill's perceptive sense has dulled considerably of late. This conclusion has been reached since it became generally known that the senator has determined to oppose any efforts President Cleveland may make to bring about the confirmation of Wheeler H. Peckham, nominated to fill the vacancy on the United States Supreme bench caused by the death of Justice Blatchford and prolonged by the Senate's refusal to confirm the nomination of William B. Hornblower. Senator Hill's successful fight against Mr. Hornblower was actuated by a desire to get even with the president because he had recently assisted in upsetting some of the senator's cherished plans for the advancement of machine methods in New York politics. Similar objection is made to Mr. Peckham and with infinitely more of reason. Never since the day when democrats of spirit revolted against the arbitrary methods of Hillman has Mr. Peckham missed an opportunity to do the arch-republican a possible damage, and unless his energy is directed into other channels he will doubtless continue to annoy all those whom he has reason to regard as enemies of good government. Would it not seem, therefore, as though Senator Hill was somewhat shortsighted in obstructing Mr. Peckham's exit from the politics of Mr. Peckham takes his seat on the Supreme bench he becomes a nonentity so far as partisanship is concerned, and his voice is forever hushed on topics evidently distasteful to Senator Hill. It may be, though, that Senator Hill does not expect to be a candidate for anything in the future, and is engaged in the liquidation of old obligations.

The Star has decided to change its system of associated press collection of the world's news, to sever its relations with the United Press, and to connect itself with the Associated Press, and it feels that its readers are entitled to an early announcement of this decision. This change is not attributable to any dissatisfaction with the news service of the United Press or to any personal disagreement or unbecomingly of the representatives of The Star and those of the United Press. On the contrary, The Star's relations with the United Press have been uniformly pleasant and are severed with regret. The Star makes the change because it believes that the Associated Press, in the management of which a large part of the newspapers have an equal voice, is organized upon the only correct basic principle and is erected upon the only foundation which will insure a permanent structure. The Star allies itself with other newspapers constituting the Associated Press, and its deliberate judgment that its permanent news efficiency and independent business interests will be largely promoted by this course.

It is hoped that every employee of the government will read and take as addressed to himself the appeal made by the citizens' committee on canvass. The department clerks form a large part of the community. They are among the best citizens of Washington, supplying the substantial support of the churches and of all the good institutions of the city. It is natural, then, that when lack of employment brings great suffering upon another large part of the community that an appeal for help should be made to the department clerks, whose incomes, fortunately, do not suffer on account of "shut downs" or business depression. This appeal, too, would be made with full confidence that the response would be a generous one, for the clerks have never failed to give aid when the cause was good. The committee, however, is encumbered by being unable to make a personal canvass of the departments, the cabinet having decided it unwise to permit such a canvass. They therefore ask that the clerks meet them half way and use such means as the committee has provided for collecting these contributions.

In the course of yesterday's senatorial debate on the straddling resolution as to Hawaii which says as little as possible, Senator Gray, the President's champion, told the President he had sent to Hawaiian Islands "a gentleman to see with his eyes and hear with his ears what the President could not see or hear with his own." And Commissioner Paramount Blount seems to have succeeded admirably. He not only saw and heard things that the President could not see or hear with his own eyes, but he also saw and heard things that the President could not see or hear with his own ears. He saw and heard things that the President could not see or hear with his own eyes, but he also saw and heard things that the President could not see or hear with his own ears.

It is interesting to have statistics collected on the number of Hawaiian babies who are named after Grover Cleveland by monarchist sympathizers. The fact has about collapsed in this country.

Mr. Peckham doubtless gives due consideration to the numerous proverbs to the effect that the higher a man is lifted up the harder he is liable to be slammed down.

All that is needed to complete the financial revival is a prize fight at Cripple Creek.

As a general thing the coming of the congressional directory—whether it be bound in crimson cloth or wrapped in brick-hued paper—is never for rejoicing. Other government publications may provoke temporary interest or achieve widespread agricultural circulation, but they never bloom with that perennial beauty which has been the peculiar and fascinating possession of the volume in which is panoramically displayed the hand-made and autobiographical pedigree of every Senator and Representative, the President himself, and the members of his cabinet. But the latest edition is a disappointment. Typographically it is at least equal to any of its predecessors and it is doubtful whether any improvement could be made in the arrangement of the subsidiary information, but there is a conspicuous lack in what some of the fastidious occupants of the press gallery have been pleased to term the "obituary department." Almost immediately after the assembling in extraordinary session of the Fifty-third Congress an edition of the directory appeared in which Michael Joseph McEltrick, representing the tenth congressional district of Massachusetts, sketched his decidedly interesting career. Modestly mentioning personal attributes of which no man need be ashamed he declared that "this symmetrical and splendid physique is partially due to his taste for athletics, which he developed in early life, and the time he had spent in the military service, and his reputation for powers of strength, activity and endurance, and a record for wrestling, leaping and pedestrianism which for a long time remained unbroken. He won the long-distance pedestrian championship of America in 1890, and during his long athletic career never met with a defeat; at present he is engaged in a journal. Those statements have in them much of real interest, and their reappearance was confidently looked for until some earthly or other power should remove Mr. McEltrick to another sphere of usefulness; but in the latest edition—and presumably an expurgated one—they are missing. Just why the editor of the directory should "blue-pencil" Mr. McEltrick's "copy" is a mystery, and perhaps of the political sort. There has been no change in the sketch furnished by Senator Hill; a condition that only deepens and darkens the enigmatic depths. Is there discrimination or has the directory fallen into the hands of the "ring" that prevented the certain publication of Major Martin's speech on the Hill bill? Because Mr. McEltrick and the editor of the directory are engaged in journalism is no excuse for an exhibition of professional jealousy. Lovers of athletics should insist upon fairness in the columns of our capitoline cotemporary. If sporting subjects are to be debarr'd why should the management continue to publish advertisements of lawyers, manufacturers, horse and cattle breeders and dealers in eggs and dairy products?

The House of Representatives will do the country a real service if it takes up and carries to an unquestionable decision the case of Judge Jenkins, who, by injunction, interfered with and prevented a strike of Northern Pacific railroad employes, and compelled cessation of the efforts of labor organization officials who were inciting those employes to quit work. The injunction was granted upon application of the receivers who are in charge of Northern Pacific affairs, and was for awhile the subject of much comment. Now the trades unions are agitating the impeachment of Judge Jenkins, and the matter will almost surely occupy some of the attention of the House as soon as the Wilson bill is out of the way. If Judge Jenkins did the right and the legal thing the country should have the case made conspicuously plain; if he erred without malice he should be reprimanded; if he deliberately misused one of the law's greatest powers he should suffer prompt removal from the judicial office. A great principle is at stake.

Is there not something either humorous or inconsistent in the McCrory resolution as to Hawaii? How can the majority of the House committee on foreign affairs be agitating the impeachment of the President of the United States that interferes with the domestic affairs of an independent nation is contrary to the spirit of American institutions, and at the same time smile approbation at the same President because he not only interfered with the domestic affairs of an independent nation, but did so in behalf of an utterly debased royalty which has been overthrown by decent people who were weary of monarchical misrule?

Florida's treatment of her militia is not judicious. In turning them around so quickly there is danger of making some of the young men dizzy.

It would be manifestly unkind of the Senate's judicial efforts to require President Cleveland to guess again.

It will soon be known whether it was the Corbett-Mitchell fight or the Mitchell-Corbett fight.

Mr. Quigg's name sounds like an exclamation point spelled out.

Another Historic Possibility.
If Governor Mitchell keeps on in his way He may be a star in a pugilist play.

An Agricultural Success.
"How is Dykins getting along with the farm he bought?"
"Pretty well. He tells me he saved money on it last year."
"How?"
"Rented it to another man."

Remunerative.
"Does literature pay?" asked the idler.
"I should say so," replied the country editor. "Every time we print a poem the author comes in and buys at least twenty copies of the paper to send away."

Sensitive.
"Are you fond of skating?" asked the girl who was trying to be entertaining.
"No," replied the man who kicks about household expenses.
"You miss a great deal of fun."
"Perhaps. But when I think of how much ice is going to cost next summer skating seems like sacrilege."

Johnny's Arithmetic.
"Johnny," said the school boy's mother, "do you like our arithmetic?"
"No, I think the influence of that book is unwholesome and depressing."
"Why?"
"Because it is full of horrible examples." And his mother was so stunned that she forgot to punish him.

Social Distinctions.
Poor Peter Jackson heaves a sigh.
In grief his head is bent.
"It's hard," he moans, "to find that I can't even be a 'gent.'"

A Terrible Accident.
"There was a terrible accident on the road this morning," said the general passenger agent of the S. L. O. and W. railway to his wife.
"How did it happen?"
"Carelessness of a trusted employee."
"Dear, dear. Many people killed?"
"I believe so. But that wasn't the accident. You see the trusted employee talked about the occurrence so that it got into the newspapers."

Gov. Hill vs. Senator Hill.
From an Interview With David B. Hill in 1886.
The confirming power has been used all ways only to be abused. It does not reject bad men. It rejects good men to keep bad men in. It does not work as a help or enlightenment to the President or governor. It works as a hindrance and a check. It makes in the federal Senate a series of as many Presidents in petto as there are representatives of states in that body. It makes Senators a series of as many executives the burden of such office brokers.

The duty of executives is administrative. They should have the right to appoint and remove their agents in administration. The business of Senators is participation in legislation. They should be free to attend to it. Now they claim in effect to be assistant Presidents and assistant governors and seek to make elected Presidents and elected governors subject to dictation. Presidents are chosen by the people indirectly, but really. Federal Senators are chosen by subsidiary elections of state legislatures.

A President on taking office as the representative of the nation will find himself confronted by Senators and with two-thirds were chosen four and six and two years before. He cannot name his own cabinet. Every member of it must be passed on by an oligarchical club of patronage mongers before he can have his services.

The successors of the same oligarchy have sought to dictate to Cleveland in order to invade the precincts of his very mind, to make him tell why he preferred one subordinate to another, and to carry out his obedient and solemn trust. He has rightly resisted such informal influence within his constitutional rights, and the result ought to be extended until the last vestige of the confirming pretense has been destroyed.

Small Business.
From the New York Recorder.
Mr. Hill thinks he can give another slap in the face to Mr. Cleveland by turning down the Peckham nomination. Meantime the Supreme Court docket is crowded with Federal cases and the efficiency of the first tribunal of the land suffers.

The Right Ribbons

At

PERRY'S.

A VERY SMALL STOCK OF RIBBONS will make a very considerable show. It is when you bring some shade to be matched or come in quest of some special color that you realize the value of a really complete assortment.

Who doesn't have a little matching to do?
Don't you all want a shade that is out of the ordinary occasionally?
You needn't worry yourself—nor plod the city over. Just make a bee-line for HERR. If what you seek is in the "realm of the living fashion" we have it. Time saved. Money, too—most likely—for we are modest appraisers and every now and again there is ground for a special reduction.

Here is an illustration—
3 and 3 1/2 inch NACRE, GROS GRAIN, with fancy edge, and BLACK and WHITE RIBBONS—Regular prices—45c., 55c. and 65c.

Special 21c.
But even if we haven't called the cutter in service—our pencil makes light marks—and our qualities give the utmost satisfaction—These are the favorites with everybody just now:

Tints have their reign—and our stock is loyal to them.
We are the "color bearers."

Remnant Day,

Tomorrow, Friday, January 26.

Stock methods in our business positively prohibit remnant accumulations. They must "move on." The only alternative, then, is to get rid of them. The reduced price is the motive power that brings about the desired result. Here's where the Remnant Day comes in. That's its sole object. It serves our purpose as nothing else could, and for that reason we give our entire advertising space and our best business energy one day in each week to this Remnant Day. The greater the business the greater the remnants—the smaller the prices, the quicker the distribution. Tomorrow lower prices than ever before await you. In Black and Colored Dress Goods a vast variety of lengths, from two to five yards in plain and fancy weaves are marked at half and less than half former prices. Also about one hundred dozen lengths, from six to eight yards each, are now marked $2.00 to $16.00—just half price. Silk Department offers in lengths from one-half to three yards, in dark colors and pretty shades of pink, lilac, blue, mauve, etc., at one-half to two-thirds former prices.
